IMPACT ON WOMEN AND GIRLS

Since 26 March 2015, the conflict in Yemen has dramatically escalated to the point where Yemen has become one of the worst humanitarian crises in the world today.

An estimated 20.7 million people – over two thirds of the population – are in need of some kind of assistance or protection. Some 8,167 Yemenis have been killed, more than 46,000 have been injured, over 2 million people are internally displaced and 900,000 recent returnees.

The humanitarian situation was already dire prior to 2015, but the last two years have put the country on the brink of famine, with food insecurity affecting 60 per cent of the population; and a recent cholera outbreak affecting 330,000 people, with over 5,000 suspected cases every day.

The coping mechanisms of Yemenis are stretched to their limit, with women and girls paying the heaviest price, like in most humanitarian crises.

There are an estimated 2.2 million women and girls of childbearing age in Yemen today. Rising food shortages have left an estimated 1.1 million pregnant women malnourished, and threaten the lives of 52,800 women who are likely to develop complications during childbirth.

In a country with one of the highest rates of maternal mortality in the Arab region, lack of food, poor nutrition and eroding healthcare, worsened by the outbreak of cholera, could mean an increase in premature or low-birth weight babies and severe postpartum bleeding, making the process of giving birth even more life threatening.

As a result of the precarious security situation and the difficulty of access across the country, reproductive health personnel, commodities and services in health facilities have become much more scarce and difficult for women and girls to reach.

The escalation of the conflict and the ensuing humanitarian repercussions have further weakened the position of women and girls in the Yemeni society, leading to a near erosion of their protection mechanisms and to their increased vulnerability to violence and abuse. Incidents of gender-based violence (GBV) have reportedly increased by more than 63 percent over the last two years, putting 2.6 million women at risk of gender-based violence.
Hayat, 29 years old
"After my father died and the conflict erupted, my family became too poor to support me. I soon became a burden to them."

“My family took me to a shelter because they could no longer care for me. At that point, I felt that all my dreams were shattered and that I was just a burden on this world.”

Aiysha, 13 years old
"My family forced me to get married and took me out of school."

"I was expected to become pregnant soon after the wedding. I had a really difficult pregnancy and complications during labour. I was rushed to hospital."

"My baby is fine now, but I am still angry with my family for making me leave school.”

Ameera, 28 years old
“I fled with my six months old baby to escape clashes near my home. I now live in a camp for displaced persons in Ibb. I was on my own with nobody to help me so I just carried my baby and left. I could not even take any of my belongings.”

Shahd, 10 years old
"We were displaced from Taizz and now live in a school.
“I wish I could go back to my house and sleep in my room. I want to go back to school and be with my classmates and teachers.”
2016 MAIN ACHIEVEMENTS

In response to the humanitarian crisis in Yemen, UNFPA has been striving to meet the urgent health needs of women and girls, with a focus on reproductive health, including life-saving services to pregnant women. UNFPA has also stepped up its protection and assistance services to women and girls who face gender-based violence. In cooperation with local authorities, non-governmental organizations and UN agencies across the country, UNFPA managed to provide more than 1 million people with sexual and reproductive health services, and services that prevent and respond to gender-based violence services in 2016.

“We went through the worst time of our life, but we have a new life now.”

Warda, 20 years old
Warda and her husband had to escape the intensifying fighting in Sa’ada when she was three months pregnant.

“I began to bleed heavily. When we reached Amran my husband rushed me to a mobile clinic operating nearby but it was too late. I had lost the baby.”

“I went into a severe depression and was told by the doctors to go to a UNFPA women centre for counselling. At the centre, I learnt new skills and learnt how to sew. I feel much better, and look forward to brighter days’.

“We went through the worst time in our life, but we have new life now, and we cannot wait for the arrival of our baby.”

Samia, 33 years old
Samia was in an abusive marriage that ended with her husband throwing her out of the house. “At this point I had lost my family, my husband and my children. I remember thinking that life could not get any worse”, said Samia.

“After 6 years of battling depression living on charity, I discovered the ‘women safe space’. Here I received support, counselling, educational classes, and I learnt sewing and embroidery.”

Life almost feels normal again. I am now trying to see my children, as this is my right as a mother.”
1. Strengthening health systems to provide emergency obstetric and neonatal care and other integrated reproductive health services to reduce maternal mortality and morbidity.

2. Strengthening mechanisms that prevent violence against women and provide protection and services to survivors of gender-based violence, focusing on women and young girls.

3. Specifically address the humanitarian needs that result from the most recent escalation, including famine and cholera.
